er, in the financial support of churches, bruises, sore lips, chapped hands, chilthere should not be appeal less to com-mercial and selfish considerations and more to Christian motives of loyal devotion, generosity and sacrifice. In fact, the pew system, as an adequate means of support, has practically broken down. Few are the particles where it has not and by yearly appeals to make up a deficiency. On the other hand, who can estimate how many that everam has kept away from the bouse of their heavenly Father! In a city church that is awake to its mission, the appropriated pew, with its provision for comfortable and complacent selfishness, is an anachronism, an obstacle surviving from the past. When a new church is built, in place of pews put in chairs, and you have taken a long step toward making the church truly democratic. If it be really a question of private pew versus people, surely there will be abandoned. Aside from means and methods, the great company of Children for the company to be supplemented by other methods means and methods, the great company means and methods, the great company of Christians, face to face with pressing problems of the time, ought not even to seem to be dumb and impotent, paralyzed and past (selling, if they are lyzed and past (selling), if they are lyzed of Christians, face to face with pressing
